What is your ART?

We all have our own definition of art. Our own tastes. Our own preferences. What's yours? The AFA wants you to share the art in your life at www.whatisyourart.ca.

Create a list of the art in your life and share with your friends; if you're looking for inspiration, try watching our commercial (airing on CTV) or see what some of Alberta's best-known & loved public figures had to share.

Art is everywhere around us. Take the time to consider the things in your life that you consider your art – the things that give you joy and bring out your passion and excitement. Take the time to tell us: what is your art?

CTV Edmonton and CTV Calgary are running amazing What is Your Art contests featuring prize packages that will allow the winner to enjoy an amazing year of arts events and attractions in their community - the October 21 deadline is approaching fast so don't be late!

Chrysalis - A Culture of Excellence

One of the great attributes of Alberta Culture Days is being able to express your creativity and culture. With Chrysalis joining the celebration for the first time this year, we get to further expand our idea of what culture means and the many ways we can express it.

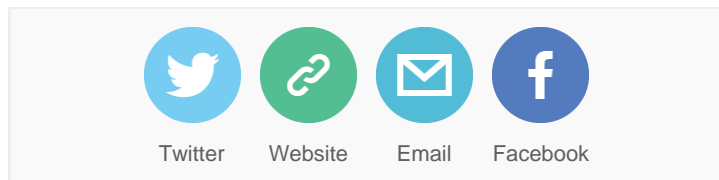

Since 1968 Chrysalis has been offering “personalized services to help thousands of people with people with disabilities receive training, develop life and vocational skills, find employment and volunteer opportunities, and realize a better quality of life.”

Melani Orr, Human Resources Manager, and Matt Mandrusiak, Communications and Marketing Manager, at Chrysalis decided to get involved in Alberta Culture Days because they said it is about “diversity of interest.”

“As a whole, our organization is reliant on the community and volunteer work,” Matt says. Culture Days is a way to “celebrate employees and programs,” he adds.

They want to focus programming around activities their clients can enjoy, such as drumming, improvisation and music and movement. They plan on heavily using social media to connect the event to their fans and customers.
